—About midnight, Tuesday night, a company of Kuklux, dressed in ghostly habitaments, and armed with pistols, visited the residence of a colored man named Robert Anderson, near McWhartersville, Tenn, about five miles from Nashville, and in se, pulchral tones demanded admission. Anderson, learing for the safety of himself and family, drimly declined to admit them. They nily, firmly declined to admit them. They then attempted to force an entrance, when he fired upon them with a rifle, instantly illing one of the party, who proved to be earneighbor named H. C. Blair. The other found, this morning, lying at the colored man's door, in his mask and white robes, with his pistol by his side, a frightful look-ing object indeed.

Cincinnati, March 19.—About noon yesterday, the fine side wheel, mail line steamer, Magnolis, left her wharf at the foot of Walnut street, for Maystille. Her freight bills were heavy, and and her passenger list contained the names of about one hundred persons, in addition to a crew of nearly forty persons, a total of one hundred and forty souls on board.

The passenger list was unusually large, and all were in the best of spirits. On the boat there were families homeward bound, merchants traveling on business and pleasure seekers.

The explosion and horrible disaster to life and property, occurred nearly opposite the town of California, about twelves above the city. As is not gen-opposite the town of California, about twelves above the city. As is not generally the case, the Magnolia had no passengers to put off at California, and, consequently, did not make a landing. Past the turn she steamed, passengers on board waving handkerchiefs to those on shore.

A moment afterward a terrible explosion occurred, and the Magnolia, with all its precious freight, was a wreek. No one knows how the explosion occurred, but those in the violnity say that the forward part of the works of the boat were blown to atoms.

Capt. J. B. Purcell, from whom we learned many of the particulars connected with the terrible disaster, happened to be out in the river with a skiff, and was one of the first at the rescue. He describes the scene as being terrible in the extreme.

Those not killed or blown overboard by the explosion, guthered around the guards on the afterpart of the boat, but the wreck having taken fire, the flames spread with frightful rapidity, and those passengers clinging to the afterpart of the boat, were forced to accept the alternative of jumping into the cold waters, or being burned alive.

Most of them accepted the former, and madly jumped into the river; and, as Capt. Purcell said, those who could swim staid on board and were burned alive, and those who could not swim staid on board and were burned alive, and those who could not swim asvim staid on board and were burned alive, and those who could not swim jumped overboard.

The explosion occurred just as the first dinner table had been cleared and the second being prepared. Most of the male passengers, who had taken dinner at the first table, were standing on the forward deck, and with them a considerable number of ladies. All of these, with but one or two exceptions, were lost. Those on the afterpart of the boat, who were not rescued by skiffs, were, as we have already said, elther drowned by jumping overboard or burned alive. Capt. Purceli informs us that the citizens of California, with some eight or ten skiffs, rallied to the relief of the distressed persons, and succeeded in rescu-

Their names were Captain John Law, of Aberdeen, Ohio, slightly injured; William Burton, barkeeper of the Magnolia, also slightly bruised and burned; Thomas Carran, of Dover, Kentucky, was badly scalded; George L. Gillis, of Covington, Kentucky, was uninjured; a Mrs. Fite, of Higginsport, Brown county, Ohio, was safe; a deckhand, name unknown, was unhurt and about the city somewhere. The above named were passengers, and had stopped at the Metropolitan. At the time of our visit most of them had retired to rest.

We learned at the hotels that many of those saved had been taken to the house of their friends in various parts of this city and Covington.

At the Spencer House we found Mr. A. C. Hull, a manufacturer at, Pittsburgh. He was in his stateroom, asleep, at the time of the explosion. WASHINGTON, March 19.

The Chair submitted resolutions from the Wisconsin Legislature instructing Congressmen to adhere to their present policy and endorsing the course of Mr. Stanton.

Mr. Stanton.

Mr. Summer presented petitions from the citizens of Washington against being annexed to Georgetown; and of colored men in two counties in Delaware, stating they are deprived of the rights of citizens, and asking they be secured to them. Referred.

On motion of Mr. Pomeroy the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to return the resolution asking what had been the expenses of the war, navy and interior departments since 1835, in order that he might offer an amendment asking an explanation of each expenditure.

Mr. Trumbull called up the bill to remove the political disabilities of R. R. Butler, of Tennessee, which he explained.

Mr. Buckslew moved to amend it by statution or sets of Congress. He said it would otherwise have the effect to recognize the 14th amendment as valid.

It appearing that the Senators desired to debate the bill, Mr. Sherman insisted on the order of the day, and the Senate took up the bill to relieve oertain manufactures from internal tax. The question was on the amendments made in the committee.
Mr. Morgan moved to strike out refiners from the amendment of the Committee containing the tax on the various articles.
Mr. Morgan advocated his amendment, and Mr. Sherman and others opposed it.
The amendment was lost by a vote of 21 against 24.

The amendment was lost by a vote of 21 against 24.

Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, then offered his amendment striking out the provision in reference to refined sugars, &c., and inserting one including all sugars, except those produced from sorghum or imphee. Rejected.

Mr. Van Winkle moved to strike out the amendment of the committee to section one, leaving it as it passed the House, and striking out the tax on turpentine, coffee and its substitutes, spices, refined sugars, jewelry, &c. Adopted.

Adopted.

The question was resumed on Mr. Van Winkle's amendment offered Tuesday, reducing the tax on petroleum one half, and it was adopted on the amendment of the committee, providing that no drawback shall be make on the exportation of any article after the first of April.
